

THE GUARINI INSTITUTE SPONSORS EXCHANGE AND FACULTY-DIRECTED PROGRAMS THROUGHOUT THE ACADEMIC YEAR

EXCHANGE PROGRAMS

Dartmouth-sponsored exchanges are programs that involve direct enrollment with a host institution to enable a university experience similar to that of a matriculated student. Students either participate independently or with a small number of other Dartmouth students. Students choose their courses based on available offerings at the host institution and can earn transfer credit to count toward their Dartmouth diploma. The length of exchange programs vary; they may last for a trimester, a semester, or a full academic year. Exchange programs are offered every year during specified terms outlined below.

FACULTY-DIRECTED PROGRAMS

Dartmouth-sponsored Faculty-Directed Programs are term-length programs where students earn Dartmouth credit. Dartmouth faculty lead a group of students onsite in excursions and often teach at least one course. These programs are designed to take advantage of the experiential learning unique to being immersed in a host country. Faculty Directed Programs are offered during the specific terms outlined below (locations and terms are subject to change).

Foreign Study Programs (FSP)

Foreign Study Programs (FSP) offer meaningful engagement with the local people and resources. These programs provide opportunities to study other cultures and disciplines in depth and to gain new perspectives on society. While most FSPs are taught in English, FSPs in the language departments offer advanced study of the country's language compared to LSAs.

Domestic Programs (DSP)

Domestic Study Programs (DSP) provide in-depth experience of the life and culture of the domestic locale through substantive courses and meaningful engagement with the local people and resources. DSPs allow students opportunities to study US-based cultures, environments, and disciplines in depth as well as to gain new perspectives on our society.

Language Programs (LSA)

LSAs offer in depth study of the country's language, literature and civilization and are designed for students that have intermediate or beginner language skills. Completing an LSA can satisfy Dartmouth's language requirement.

LSA and LSA+ programs allow students to live in homestays to provide a personal context through which students gain access to the culture as a whole. Studying the language, literature and civilization gives an intellectual grasp of historical and contemporary cultural patterns.

Fall Term Plus Programs (Fall+)

Guarini fall term plus programs are distinguished by their interdisciplinary approach. Fall+ qualifies for one Dartmouth course credit and serve as a student's fourth course for the fall term. Fall+ will begin with two or more meetings of the course during the fall term. Then, the program is delivered off-campus for about three weeks during Dartmouth's "winterim" period.
